

Nebraska does not license insurance adjusters.

If you are a resident of Nebraska, you will need a designated home state (DHS) license to adjust insurance claims in a licensed state. Texas is a great designated home state (DHS) to consider! Once you have obtained your non-resident DHS adjuster license, you can apply for reciprocal licenses from other states.

MUST KNOW

- As a Nebraska state resident, you are able to adjust insurance claims within Nebraska without a state specific adjuster license.
- Obtaining a non-resident DHS license can increase your earning potential.
